RALLY OPENS CAMPAIGN

Large Audience of Men and Women Listen to Speakers for Harding and Coolidge. Community Singing Big Feature of the Gathering.

Women in the audience and a woman speaker on the program were innovations at the Republican Rally which filled the Town hall to about two-thirds of its capacity on Friday evening.

The popular song-leader, Albert Edmund Brown, directed the community singing which was very much enjoyed by everyone present. Beside being an entertainer and his witticisms soon put every one in good humor. In response to a special request he sang the "Armorer's Song" from "Robin Hood" and as an encore the "Sheriff of Nottingham" from the same opera.

Dr. Alfred E. Stearns presided at the meeting and welcomed the men and women gathered to express their allegiance to Republican principles and the Republican party who were especially drawn together by the white heat of indignation and the accumulated disgust of years which they would have a further opportunity to express at the polls in November. He introduced as the first speaker of the evening, Joseph Jackson, Treasurer of the Commonwealth.

Low Cost of Living

Hugh Brent
A practical householder is the real solution of an economical menage, one not necessarily imbued with a spirit that everywhere makes for ingenuity and variety at the lowest possible expense. There is, of course, the old-time type who will provide hash, beans, pork and cabbage, and liver in unvarying retrogression—but there is another—a veritable angel of the home.

"Extenders" is the watchword of the cook today; crumbs, croutons, cubes of vegetables, white sauce, spaghetti, toast, scalloped potatoes, rice, cheese (as flavor), olives, etc., make meat dishes much more effective and lasting. The "dressing" we have known only as accompaniment to chicken or duck now comes along with every bit of meat served, even to the humble sausage—of course, if you like the familiar bread, sage, and onion, why then the meat ball totals go into eclipse.

"Twenty-cent hash" is the best ever: Mash the potatoes, add a little milk and butter, stir in scraps of any meat or fish, and brown in fry-pan or oven. Good scrap, rivaling that of Philadelphia, is made of corn-meal mush containing bits of cooked ham or bacon—just a little of this, and a trace of pepper—to be cut in slices when the "hashy pudding" is cold, and fried. By coring moderate-sized potatoes lengthwise with an apple-corer, and inserting small sausages, then baking, one may have a quickly served breakfast. Put croutons—little squares of buttered toast—into your scrambled eggs, garnish with parsley, bits of cheese, or olives, and you have a good sized dish from three or four eggs. If one has a few scraps of meat, or a few bits of white sauce, a few peas, cubes of carrot or turnip, shreds of cooked onion, pouring this over the chops as good "extenders"—each forms a decided relish for the other; or one may use a little chopped pickle or some piccalilli in any meat-sauce. For cold meats use salad dressing—this last may be served thinly spread on toast in place of butter. A very good butter substitute is made by boiling down peas (green or dried) including in this a butter, cheese, or peanut flavor; children are delighted with sandwiches made with it.

The old "boiled dinner" of former days appears without any meat, and is served with milk to eat and cheese—on the next day however, have the meat with tomatoes and macaroni. The same process with a roast makes it do duty for two (or more) noon meals—arrange it with potatoes and a white-sauce, perhaps peas; on the following day have all its gravy on a selection of turnip, cauliflower, sliced boiled eggs with a sprinkle of cheese. As for the crumbs, nothing is so good and hearty as boiled onions covered with a layer of wet crumbs, slightly browned in oven. Parsnips lend themselves to this—turnips and carrots also; all fish including shrimp, salmon, oysters and scallops. Hamburg steak is good with a "cock-tail" sauce of tomato, horse-radish, lemon juice—best served with the thin fried potatoes made by slicing uncooked potatoes with a slicer.

Coffee gives you double strength in the same quantity of grains by adding a few grains of soda after it has boiled a little. Cocoa needs one teaspoon of cornstarch to four of itself, to make a rich nourishing drink; but be careful to boil it slowly for some time, as all the grains of cornstarch will burst, giving a creamy effect—a help towards the use of less milk or cream. In regard to milk, a very nice drink may be made by steeping celery in warm water with a small amount of salt, and adding two tablespoons of this to every glass of milk—though it thins the drink, it improves its quality.

Rice is a great extender—often too, a great "distender," as ye who have consumed three or four portions of rice-and-raisin pudding will amply testify. Listen—peach melba is nothing but the fruit upon boiled rice. But as the diva has a liquid voice of charm, so has the golden sirup poured upon the combination. Now I am not saying a word about flavors (at least, not in this 1920 era), but I might perhaps recommend—rose-vanilla. Rice croquettes go excellently well with meat or eggs; rice is almost indispensable in curries, soups and stews; add it to plain cornstarch pudding with fresh or dried fruit as well. It forms a good breakfast cereal.

Hulled corn is coming back to our tables. In a disguise of "hominy and cheese" I ate a good dish of it some time ago in a restaurant. It had evidently been given extra boiling; then baked with generously grated cheese. Some of our adopted families take the large cucumbers, and after paring and seeding cook the halves like summer squash, perhaps as a special treat stuffing these with rice and chopped ham, tying ends and frying in bacon fat. Chopped olives are especially fine for sandwiches: work a few bits into cheese, nut butter, stewed peas, or rice. Waldorf salad made with peanuts and apple is a delicious combination; so is an orange celery mixture.

It must be quite plain that in this article, possibilities are shown of putting together the proper calories for good meals, containing all the elements: protein, carbohydrates, the almost pure carbons, and fats—but you have been spared the statistics. I sat at table one day (a bountiful repast); but it consisted of cream of celery soup, chicken croquettes, escalloped potatoes, banana salad, corn-starch pudding. Too much of a good thing! I awoke at night with the suffocating sense of embodying a whole laundry—starch, not perspiration, was exuding from my system.

"Eat, drink, and be merry," knowing that meat bills have been cut one-third by judicious extensions of the uses of cereal products, corn-meal, wheat, vegetables. You may also reduce on sugar as somewhat best—but there's no recipe here save self-denial.

reception of a score who will attend the Pacific Coast colleges and universities, the entire party proceeded to Chicago by special train. Upon arrival at the great lake city the students were sent to nearly every school and college of note in the country.

This is the first big student consignment of Chinese boys and girls to be sent here following the decision of the official Chinese authorities to favor the American schools rather than those of Europe. According to P. K. Chu, director of Shun Pao, the leading Chinese newspaper, who was in charge of the party, his country objects to the methods of France, where more than 3,000 Chinese are enrolled in a university that is especially organized for Orientals only. Chu said:

It is not the matter of the technical education we desire for our boys and girls, as the association of the Occidentals. We want our young people to get a better understanding of the Western peoples in order to extend modern progressivism at home. The United States permits us to scatter our young people among the numerous educational institutions and that appeals to us. Hereafter the great majority of Chinese students will be sent here.

The Chinese government plans to have its own people conduct the commercial and farming affairs of the country rather than depend upon foreigners. All of the important government positions will take over by the students when they return home.

The Massachusetts division of the student party has been divided among Tufts College, Worcester Tech, Lowell Textile School, Harvard University, Institute of Technology, Y. M. C. A. College Springfield and Phillips Andover.

Republican League

While men who are prominently connected with the Party as candidates for leading offices frequently address the meetings of the Republican League, they do not do so as candidates but as apostles of Republicanism. No man pleads his own cause or displays his personal ambitions in a Republican League meeting.

The splendid growth of the League is due solely to its purpose—that of making the Republican Party a mighty power in this State. When it was organized on the last day of January last year, it had but 34 members. Its membership six months later, on July 1, 1919, was 2500! Think of that for a baby Republican elephant!

On November 1, 1919, two days before election day, the League had grown to 9000 members. On January 3rd, this year, it celebrated its first birthday with 9500 members, every one of whom was an active, enthusiastic, believing Republican.

Then the Republican League tightened its belt and rolled up its sleeves and started out on a grand drive for 50,000 members by November 1st. By the time the presidential primaries were held, April 27th, the League had recruited 15,750 members. Less than two months later, on June 1st, it had 19,357 Republicans on its membership roll. Today it has just about 21,000 members and every day sees scores more of names added to the list.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR

1830—Oct. 5, Chester Alan Arthur, born at Fairfield, Vermont.
1848—Graduated at Union College, Schenectady.
1861-2—Quartermaster General of New York State.
1871-8—Collector of the Port of New York—Removed by Hayes.
1880—November, elected Vice President.
1881—Sept. 19, Took the oath as 21st President, aged fifty.

THE public anxiety for Garfield through his long battle with death was deepened by a general dread of the vice president's succeeding to the presidency. The people as a whole knew nothing of Chester Alan Arthur, except that he had been only lately removed from the collectorship of the port of New York as a machine politician, and that he had been nominated for the vice presidency as a henchman of Roscoe Conkling.

After Arthur had been sitting in the vice president's chair only a little more than two weeks, he opened a big White House envelope one day and flushed as he glanced at the unexpected contents—the nomination of a hated "Half-Breed" to the collectorship of the port of New York. With an excited gesture, he summoned Senators Conkling and Platt, and the three "Stalwarts" flamed up with rage at the challenge to them from the new administration. When the Republican senators resigned their seats and appealed to the legislature of their state to re-elect them as a protest against the administration, the spectacle of the vice president descending to that melee lent color to the already unfavorable impression of him in the public mind.

When in the midst of the fight and a losing fight, Garfield was shot, the American people revolted at the thought that Arthur and the "Stalwarts" should profit by the assassination. The public mind revolted also at the prospect of a political boss enthroned in the White House, with his motley following about him.

That popular picture of Arthur, as a city politician out of the pages of Puck, was distorted and untrue, simply because the background was omitted from it. The real, the native character of the man had been shaped in surroundings very different from those in which the country found him when he first came under its attention. Born in Vermont to a Baptist minister, a man of education and high principles, who had come over from Ireland and who soon afterward settled in New York state, Arthur had grown up in village parsonages, where the living was plain and the thinking high.

When the great test came and he stood silently for three months in the shadow of the high office, Arthur found himself, and he left petty politics and factions behind him as he entered the White House. The public was incredulous at first, but was convinced at last that he honestly meant to be president of all the people.

Some of his old associates in machine politics were as astonished at the change that had come over their "Chet" as Falstaff and his cronies were when Prince Hal became King Henry V. Not that the new president coldly repelled the claims of friendship. He simply put first his obligations to the whole country, though it cost him dear in the regard of men like Grant and Conkling, who set him down as an ingrate.

"Why, general, if you were still president of the New York County Republican committee," Arthur frankly admitted with a smile, "I certainly would; but since I came here I have learned that Chester A. Arthur is one man and the president of the United States is another."

AN ERA OF REFORM

1883—Jan. 10, Arthur signed the civil service law.
1884—Defeated for the Republican nomination by James G. Blaine.
1886—Nov. 18, died in New York aged fifty-six.

IT IS one of the pranks of fate that Chester A. Arthur, whom President Hayes put out of the New York custom house as a spoilsman and a political boss, should find himself in the White House seven months after Hayes left it and conducting a reform administration. It was the mandate and lesson of Garfield's assassination that we must get rid of factions and spoils or the government itself might next be struck down as its chief had been. Arthur saw that this was the logic of the tragedy which had thrust him into the presidency and he did his best to clean house.

The race for preferment had excited an unnatural appetite for public office, and the getting of a job was regarded as exhilarating sport. From policeman, fireman and letter carrier to chiefship and consulship, every place on the payroll of city, state or nation went by favor. Two endless processions were forever moving, one made up of those who had been turned out or turned down, and the other of those who were struggling to get in.

The civil service law, which was passed in Arthur's administration, took out of politics the departmental clerkships in Washington but 85 per cent of the federal employees as a whole were left under the spoils system. Nevertheless, the difficult first step had been taken toward the present comprehensive system, when all but a few hundred of the hundreds of thousands of places are open equally to self-respecting applicants, regardless of parties or politicians.

Arthur also was the useful instrument in carrying forward the reconciliation of the sections. He was the first president in his generation who made no reference in his annual messages to the South or to a Southern question. He was indeed almost the first president in 50 years who felt free to ignore the unhappy issues of sectionalism.

When he stepped into the White House Arthur found his party rent by factions. He left it more nearly united than it had been before in 20 years and with at least a chance to win again in 1884. He might himself have been the Republican nominee in that year if he had not scrupulously refused to take an active part in promoting his candidacy.

He looked as well as acted the president. The first city man in a line of rural or small town men, Arthur was the best dressed man to sit in the chair since Washington, and perhaps the handsomest, with a tall, graceful figure, the manners of the great world and a grave but easy courtesy.

Although a widower president, his sister, Mrs. McElroy, was a charming mistress of the White House and under them the social life of the mansion took on a more sumptuous tone. His son and namesake was away at school much of the time, but his little daughter, Nellie Arthur, lit up the household with her song and laughter.

Mrs. Arthur died only in the year before her husband's unexpected rise to the presidency, and her absence from his side was a haunting sorrow to Arthur.

Declining to remove the collector of the port of New York, whom Garfield had appointed, against his protest, he even permitted that officeholder to leave his post and oppose him in the contest at the national convention.

No other president has done so little as Arthur did to obtain a second term. It was well, not only for the sake of the high example he set, but for his own sake also. Arthur's health was not equal to the strain of another administration and another term in the White House, where he lived not wisely but too well. In less than two years after leaving the presidency, followed by the good will of all the people, he was dead of apoplexy.

Poor Packing Causes Waste.

Few persons considering the cost of living realize that more than $700,000,000 is added to the cost of their food, clothing and other necessities each year because of the waste caused by damage, unscientific handling and the tremendous cost of packing these commodities. The railroads and the shippers realize it, as shown by their conducting a campaign to reduce to the minimum the waste through damage, and to utilize to the utmost the capacity of freight cars, which are hauled half empty.

These are some of the items which enter into this waste estimate—damage and theft, $100,000,000; wasted lumber used only once in packing cases, $240,000,000; empty car space, $209,000,000; and the staggering cost to the railroads of hauling half empty cars more than 6,000,000,000 miles, $157,000,000. It is estimated that from 10 to 25 per cent of the cost of food-stuffs goes to pay for the crates which are thrown away.

THE BIG GRANGE EVENT

Plans Fast Maturing for Boston Session of National Body Next November

Even hot weather and busy farm work seem to put no damper on the rapidly rising wave of Grange enthusiasm that covers New England, over the coming session of the National Grange in Boston November 10-19 next, which thousands of Patrons are planning to attend. Big classes of new members for subordinate and Pomona Granges, with groups of hundreds promised for the special sixth degree sessions to be held in all the six states the next two months, are the signs that point to the certainty that the 10,000-class for the seventh degree in Boston will be reached.

A competent housing bureau has been organized, which assures lodging to all who come to Boston, no matter how many come! Provided, however, that early application is made to this bureau at Room 136, State House, Boston. It is conservatively estimated that not less than 20,000 New England Grange members will attend some of the Boston sessions, while the greater part of them will be there on Friday, November 12th, for the seventh degree, either as candidates or as spectators.

Following the degree work on the above-mentioned evening, a great program will be put on, which announcement will make every New England Patron want to be there. Governor Calvin Coolidge, the members of his council and all the heads of departments in the Commonwealth, with the mayor of Boston and other city officials, will be the guests of the Grange, and Governor Coolidge will give an address. The Weber male quartet of Boston, one of the finest in New England, is to furnish music for the degree work and as a part of the Friday evening program will put on an hour's concert, reinforced by the Meistersingers of Boston—a rare musical treat for all who attend. The quartet is also to sing for the memorial services in Faneuil Hall Sunday night and at the service to be held at Plymouth Rock.

The magnitude of the agricultural exhibit that is to be run on the lower floor of Mechanics' Building in connection with the National Grange session, is hardly realized as yet; but it is certain to be one of the best quality displays of New England agricultural products that has ever been made. Plans for the state exhibits are all well under way and large space is to be used therefor. The market gardeners, the fruit growers, the cranberry growers and other special lines of agriculture are all to be much in evidence, while some indication of the interest shown is seen in the fact that the National Cranberry Growers' Exchange has appropriated $2500 for their exhibit while the maple sugar makers' association of Vermont will undertake the most pretentious exhibit they have ever made. While some of the states will specialize in their leading products, Massachusetts agriculture will be shown in its great variety of staples, doubtless surprising many of the distant farmers as to the number of such staples being regularly grown in the state.

In addition to the large number of Grange members who will come to Boston for several days of the session, and those who will drive their machines, plans are under way to run in special trains from Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Connecticut; while it is confidently expected that a reduced railroad rate of fare and one-third will be secured for all who come by regular trains, from any part of the country.

It is to be borne in mind that, except when the higher degrees are being conferred, all National Grange sessions are open to all subordinate Grange members; so that there is the whole 175,000 membership of New England to draw from, in addition to the crowd coming from more distant points. No such Grange gathering as this will be has ever been held before in the history of the Order.

Boys Who Became National Heroes

"When we celebrate our country's independence, how many of us realize that our strong young republic was largely a gift from boys?" says an editorial in the July Boys' Life, the Boy Scout Magazine. "If we can judge from the ages of some of the officers of Washington's army, many of the rank and file must have been exceedingly youthful."

"Lafayette was but nineteen when he journeyed from France and offered his sword and service to the struggling Continental army. Georges Taffe, another French officer, was eighteen; Alexis Beaumont, seventeen. Elkanah Watson, an American, at the age of seventeen was entrusted with charge of shipments of powder to various places of siege. Viscount Rochambeau, a French nobleman, who, like Lafayette, left the luxury of his life of wealth and ease to endure the privations and hardships in the American army for the sake of an ideal, was but fourteen years old when he enlisted."

"There is a long list of officers from seventeen to twenty years old, among them such noted names as John Trumbull and Charles Pinckney; Steven Mason, a colonel at twenty, Baron de Kalb was only twenty-five when he became famous in defense of our colonies, and John Paul Jones, hero of the sea, twenty-eight when he threw his then veteran experience to the cause of the colonists.

"Youth has done much to give our country independence. Youth, in many other ways, not on the battlefield, can preserve its freedom and honor."

It is scarcely too much to say that a poor orchard is worse than none. Uncared-for trees are a source of loss to their owners and a menace to the neighbors' orchard that is kept in up-to-date fashion.

C. E. UNION MEETING

The South church society which had 82 percent of its members present, one of the highest percentages ever attained. The other societies ranked as follows: Ballardvale society, 61 1/2 per cent; West society, 59 per cent; Baptist society 48 per cent; North Andover society 38 per cent, the Free church, 34 per cent.

The Loyalty campaign for Christian Endeavor was the subject of the address by Miss McLean, superintendent of the movement and she spoke with much enthusiasm on the definite Loyalty goals to be attained before the fortieth anniversary convention which will be held in New York on July 6 to 11, 1921. Two of the principal goals are a Christian Endeavor society ideal of fifty per cent net gain in membership and a sustaining Alumni association in every Union.

Mrs. Robert V. Deymond, former secretary of the Union, gave a very interesting report of the Northfield Convention which she attended last August.

Following the meeting the party adjourned to the dining room where games were played and refreshments served by Misses Bertha Cuthill, Hilda McKenna and Ruth Saunders and James Napier, Jr., John Caldwell and Wendell H. Kydd.

Long Telephone Conversations

Many telephone users hold the lines for an unnecessarily long period of time.

Long telephone conversations result in the delay and annoyance of repeated busy line reports, particularly in connection with party lines.

Limiting conversations to as short a time as possible, and giving up a party-line when requested to do so, will assist in maintaining good telephone service.

Dogs Seldom Kill Sheep

Some people have said that one of the most interesting occupations in the world is tending sheep. Certainly it is a quiet, peaceful task most of the time. We have been told, however, that on occasions conditions arise where it becomes a pretty difficult job with very serious results often following. Even such Legislatures as Massachusetts has had, have passed on more than one occasion, bills attempting to control that which has been charged with being the most serious menace to the proper tending of sheep, namely the dog, and at the present time, if the writer's memory serves him correctly, sheep killed by dogs or by death due to whatever mischief the dogs may be responsible for, must be paid for out of public funds. We have further been told, however, that dogs very seldom kill sheep. What really happens is that the dog jumps into a flock of sheep and at once there is a panic and the sheep run they know not where, until they either die from exhaustion or tumble over some steep precipice, or in any one of several ways bring about their own end. The dog of course, follows. He may snap and bark a bit, on occasions he may actually attack, but in most cases the whole situation is due to the poor, misguided sheep themselves.

People operate in much the same way. In one form or another attacks are made upon them, sometimes open, sometimes covert, sometimes slight, sometimes violent, but seldom resulting in actual overthrow unless the people begin to run. Then we are unto those who are a part of this sort of a procedure. The week in Boston has illustrated this kind of a condition. Undoubtedly there has been much unsound, unsentimental, and unquestionably unethical, banking carried on in Boston and in Massachusetts at large during the last few years. Without question some of the trust companies have been given charters to do business, where the public would be better off if they had never been brought into being, but under the oversight that the Commonwealth exercises, we believe there is not the least question but that practically every bank in Massachusetts is sound, provided the regular procedure of banking is allowed to take its course. When, however, that is interfered with, and some dog jumps into the crowd and starts a scare, like the frightened sheep, the depositors have rushed to one or another of the banks that have been whispered about, and trouble has followed.

There is not a banking institution in the United States, investing the savings of the people, that could pay on twenty-four hours' notice all the money that all its depositors might make demands for, without seriously impairing its assets and complicating all of its affairs; simply because banking business is one great function in which one depends upon another, in which the savings of a hundred people may make up the needs of a single great demand. Jones's savings are loaned to Smith upon a first-class mortgage, to cover the house that Smith wants to build. Smith could not build the house if he could not use Jones's savings. The bank acts as the agent in making Jones's savings return to him a fair rate of interest, and in making them available to Smith so that he may have the home he much needs.

Or in the case of a corporation, a great company like the United States Rubber Company uses the services of 50,000 employees. It goes into all parts of the world to buy its rubber. It must hold in its merchandise account many millions of investment beyond the capital that has been subscribed by stockholders who share in its profits. It can carry on its business only by borrowing vast sums of money. It shapes its credit by every test that financial conditions know, and so that credit has some brokerage house take up a million dollars of its notes, upon which it borrows a million dollars to help in financing its business. This million dollars is sold by the brokerage house in lots of varying amounts to financial institutions and men who have money to loan, usually at rates upon which a profit can be made in doing the banking business. Savings banks are large buyers of such paper. It is likely that if the savings institutions of the United States were to unite tomorrow to require any one of a dozen great industrial organizations to pay all their indebtedness at twenty-four hours' notice, every one of the said industrial organizations would fail. Thus is created the fabric of business, of which the savings bank is one great factor. Because it represents the gathering together of the money of many thousands of people, it is subject to the caprice of more people than all the other factors in the business fabric.

Massachusetts has recognized this in her system of control over savings institutions which has been carefully planned, and in the last hundred years wisely operated. Some bad bank failures have come, more undoubtedly will come, but it is safe to say that the large proportion of them are due to the fact that people are like sheep and are seldom killed because the dog bites, but more often fall over the precipice because of their mad rush along courses that they know nothing about.

As for the particular institutions in Boston, undoubtedly the government has acted wisely in putting them into the position where they are practically unassailable, giving them an opportunity to gather in their resources and set their house in order. We have a strong feeling that the lesson to the public will be learned in a way that they never will forget, while the lesson that some of the wildcat bankers have learned will for a long time be set up before the banking fraternity as a warning to show what would better not be done if successful banking is to result.

Editorial Cinders

Well, the assessors certainly did fool most of us, but if everybody has been fooled alike there probably is not much reason to complain. This statement is not quite true, however, if we may question the procedure that has been followed in keeping the tax rate at the figure that has been fixed. The Townsman has never believed in an excessive valuation. The Townsman has believed in and advocated, and will continue to fight for, an adjustment of the valuation that will equalize the figures for all who pay taxes. The forthcoming book to show who pays the taxes will tell the story in a way that may be very interesting. The publication will be watched for with considerable anticipation.

Lower costs are coming with a jump, and let no one deny it. One of the most pronounced evidences of this is the freer employment, and after the man is employed, the greater willingness on his part to do something. Of course coincident with this situation is a lessening of the cost for most of the staples making up the cost of living. It is high time this situation materialized, and we may well rejoice that there is abundant evidence that it is actually here.

Teachers Tender Resignations

The school committee met in special session Monday night in the committee room in the Pynchard building and Dr. E. C. Conroy, chairman, presided.

The board received the resignations of two of its teachers to take effect in one month.

Miss Evelyn Webb, who succeeded Miss Bennett in the commercial department of the Pynchard school, leaves to accept a position as a private secretary in Boston. She has been here only since the opening of schools.

Clifford Hubbard who started as teacher of history and civics last Wednesday, has accepted a position in Williams College and leaves as soon as released by the board.

Mrs. Annie McIntosh, matron at the central schools, also tendered her resignation. It was accepted and Mrs. M. E. Dalton, who has charge of the lunch counter at Pynchard, was appointed to fill the vacancy.

Shut Down Saturdays

Notices have been posted by the Smith and Dove Manufacturing Company that until further notice, their mills will not operate on Saturdays. The concern has been unusually busy for several years and its product of shoe and harness threads has had a ready market. The general unrest in business and the depression in the shoe trade has caused the curtailment. The hours are now forty-three per week.

Changes in Boston and Andover Trains

The new fall time table of the Boston and Maine Railroad which went into effect September 26th shows some changes of interest to Andover patrons of the road. The changes mentioned below are given in Massachusetts time.

There is no change in trains leaving Boston except on Sunday when the 7:50 a.m. train from Boston has been discontinued.

Injured in Explosion

Word has been received here by relatives that J. Walter Brown was a victim of the recent explosion in New York, which wrecked the Morgan offices.

Mr. Brown had just returned to New York from a visit to Andover. He was going into a store near the scene of the explosion when the blast occurred and his legs were badly cut by splinters of glass.

Mr. Brown, before removing to New York, two years ago, resided on Chestnut street.

Complete University Extension Courses

Andover residents are well represented among the hundreds of Massachusetts men and women who have taken university extension courses in the past year. Some 17,000 residents of this state have enrolled in courses offered by the division of university extension during 1919-1920.

The average age of the men and women taking work with the division is thirty—the students themselves are persons of varied callings and interests. New voters, especially women have received instruction in civics, the automobile owner has learned how to manage his car, the home-maker has had an opportunity to study household management and interior home decoration through courses offered by the division. Accountants, clerks, machinists, engineers, writers of advertisements, persons of foreign birth, draughtsmen, teachers and others interested in the study of subjects of college grade, employer and employee have all been included in the personnel of university extension students.

The division of university extension was established by the legislature in order to bring opportunities for further education within the reach of all ambitious men and women. As the division offers one hundred and thirty courses by class and correspondence there is a wide range of subjects from which the person seeking to improve himself may choose a course. The division is ready to establish a class and send an instructor to conduct the work when there is a sufficient number of enrollments to assure an average attendance of twenty persons who wish to study the same subject. All residents of Massachusetts may take class or correspondence work with the division. Instruction is free; a small charge is made to cover the cost of lesson material and textbooks used in class and course work.

The following class students have recently received certificates on completing the course in which they were enrolled: Mrs. C. E. Abbott, Mrs. Rosa R. Alden, Mrs. Joseph N. Ashton, Ethel F. Brown, Mrs. Mary T. Bushnell, Mabel M. Carter, Minnie Cheever, Mrs. Thaxter Eaton, Mrs. Maude Farlow, Mrs. Burton S. Flagg, Mrs. Philip French, Ethel C. Hussey, Mrs. Mary S. Jackson, Ella S. Morrill, Mrs. John L. Phillips, Mrs. Lilla Sheppard, L. J. Smith, Edith H. Valpey, Belle J. Butterfield, Mrs. S. M. H. Gardner, Mrs. Catherine S. Tyler and Edith Wade, Conversational French.

Among the correspondence students to whom certificates have lately been issued upon the satisfactory completion of the courses in which they were enrolled are: Nellie B. Bliss, Household Management; Lewis C. Coates, Elementary Applied Arithmetic; Eric S. Cathill, Principles of Accounting; Gladys P. Douglas, English Composition A; George R. Grover, Practical Applied Mathematics; Mrs. Harry Hayward, Elementary English; David H. Munro, Elementary Applied Arithmetic; Ernestine Soehrens, Commercial Spanish; Howard G. Ayer, Mechanical Drawing, Part I; Robert W. Eagle, Industrial Accounting; William Hibbits, Power Plant Economics and Steam Boilers; Alice F. Lafond, Plain English; Harold Lunn, Elementary Applied Arithmetic.

One Pipe—The Modern way to Heat

THE MAGGEE ONE-PIPE FURNACE is the new principle in heating to which the householder may confidently look for the realization of what he has always hoped for in his heater—"hoped for" but never "realized."

To-day this realization is made possible by the unique features presented in the Maggee system. Through its single warm-air pipe, the Maggee sends all of the warm air which is generated, upstairs into the house where it is needed. Coal bills do not look so large when you realize that all of the coal heat which you pay for is utilized; no part of it is wasted. Think it over and

American Legion to Hold Bazaar

Plans for a bazaar to be held in the Town hall on Armistice Day, November 11th, were discussed at a meeting of Andover Post 8, American Legion held at headquarters on Tuesday evening.

Commander Cheney presided at the meeting and received discharge papers from the ex-service men who are entitled to Victory medals. The applications are being carefully made out and will all be forwarded at the same time, hoping to secure the medals in time for presentation on Armistice Day.

Dr. Claude M. Fuess, historian of the Post, reported that there are still large numbers of ex-service men who have not returned their information blanks which are to be used in compiling the "History of Andover in the War." Until these are received work on the book cannot be completed and Dr. Fuess urges that all service men return their blanks filled out with the needed information.

Reports were received from the committee in charge of the dance to be held in the Town hall tonight and indications are that there will be a large attendance. Music will be provided by Millington's orchestra.

Quarterly Meeting of Woman's Union

In spite of the downpour of rain on Thursday afternoon, the Woman's Union of the South church held a well-attended meeting in the ladies' parlor. Miss Mary Alice Abbot presided.

Reports from the various committees were heard which were a foreword to the work planned for the coming season. Mrs. John V. Holt gave a report for the committee appointed to revise the constitution.

Mrs. Harry A. Wright of West Andover rendered several delightful songs and Mrs. Ashton gave a great deal of pleasure with the music from her violin. Mrs. Angus acted as accompanist.

Tea was served by Mrs. Arthur W. Bassett, Mrs. Horace Hale Smith and Mrs. Hugh Bullock, Mrs. Stella J. Lownd and Mrs. John V. Holt pouring. The excellent tea and cheerful decorations of bright autumn flowers encouraged everyone to remain and enjoy a pleasant social hour before again venturing out into the inclement weather.

Obituaries

MARY SHERIDAN

Mary Sheridan of 19 Harding street died Sunday morning at her home, age eighty years. She was born in Ireland but had been a resident of Andover for the past fifty-five years.

The funeral was held Tuesday morning at St. Augustine's church at 9:00 o'clock. Solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. P. J. Campbell, assisted by Rev. Edward J. Shea of St. Mary's church, Lawrence, as deacon and Rev. John A. Nugent as subdeacon. At the offertory, Catherine Houche sang, "De Profundis."

The bearers were Martin, John A., John P. S. and William J. Doherty. Burial was in St. Augustine's cemetery, where committal services were conducted by Rev. P. J. Campbell.

KATHERINE RUTH CLOUGH

Katherine Ruth Clough, daughter of Deacon Josiah and Dorcas (Butterfield) Clough, died in Chicago, Ill., September 21st and was buried September 24th in the family lot in the South Church cemetery, this town.

Miss Clough spent her childhood and early youth in Andover. The house on Salem street was for years well known to students of Phillips Academy and the Theological Seminary, who found in the "Clough House" a real home, and in the Clough family loyal friends. While still young, Miss Clough left Andover to make her home with her brother, William E., a wholesale commission merchant of Chicago. There, as in Andover, her earnest Christian character manifested itself in a life of practical, loving service. The friendless and the needy found in her a ready champion and helper. Many friends will miss her. She is survived by her brother, William E. Clough. A sister, Elizabeth, well known and beloved in Andover, died at the home on Salem street in 1910.

Free Church Notes

At a meeting of the men of the Free Church held last Sunday, it was voted to organize a Men's Discussion Class to meet every Sunday noon. The object of the class will be to discuss present-day problems from the religious point of view. The class will be under the leadership of Mr. Wheelock. Next Sunday the subject for discussion is, "What Influence has the World War had upon the Men of America?" The class will organize and elect officers at this meeting. All men of the Free Church are cordially invited.

Next Sunday the morning service and the Church School will be given up entirely to the Rally Day exercises. Certificates will be presented to all members of the Cradle Roll who have reached the age of four and several classes will graduate from the Primary to the Senior Department. Professor C. H. Forbes of Andover Academy will speak to the children at the Church School.

Religious Survey Will Be Taken

Representatives from all the Protestant churches in Andover met at the vestry of the South church on last evening to make plans for a religious survey of the town. Nathan C. Hamblin presided at the meeting.

The town will be districted by a plan similar to that used in the Liberty Loan campaigns and each church will take charge of all the work in some given district. The survey will be made during the week of October 18th and a form of card has been adopted to be used in arranging the information thus acquired.

The purpose of this survey is simply to obtain facts and to prepare an accurate parish list for each church.

Abbot Notes

On Sunday evening at Chapel, the Rev. Markham W. Stackpole gave an inspiring talk on faithfulness. He gave warm tributes to those who have given faithful service to the school through all the years, mentioning many by name, among them Lauren F. Dearborn, whose loss is so keenly felt this year.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Campion the annual Senior picnic was again held on his delightful grounds at Haggitt's Pond, on Tuesday evening.

The season of organized sports has opened, with hockey, basketball, riding, clock golf and walking on the list. Of the country walks specified, twelve at least must be taken by every student before Thanksgiving; students taking the entire number suggested will receive arm-bands for their achievement.

In Davis Hall on Tuesday evening, October fifth at 8:00 o'clock, John Kendrick Bangs will speak on "America Abroad." He has spent much time in Europe of late, being there in an official capacity during the war and has most interesting phases of the war's aftermath to bring to his audience. Many Andover people who have enjoyed Mr. Bangs' keenness of wit and insight in dealing with lighter subjects, will be anxious to hear what he has to say on Americans abroad. The public is cordially invited to attend the lecture. No admission will be charged.

Wedding

MOONEY-STAPLETON

A pretty fall wedding was solemnized at St. Augustine's church on Wednesday afternoon at 1:00 o'clock when Miss Margaret M. Stapleton and Philip A. Mooney were united in marriage by the Rev. John A. Nugent, pastor. The single ring service was used.

The bride wore a white georgette dress with hat to match and carried a bouquet of white pinks. Her cousin, Miss Margaret Kennedy of Lawrence, was bridesmaid, and she wore a dress of midnight blue with hat to match and carried a bouquet of pinks. The best man was Joseph Muldowney, a cousin of the groom.

After the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the home of the groom's mother only the immediate family being present. The couple left for a wedding trip to New York and on their return will reside at 151 North Main street.

The groom, who is well known here, is employed in the upholstery department of the A. B. Sutherland Company, Lawrence.

Natural History Societies Entertained

A walk in search of mushrooms, an exhibit of interesting collections, reports from the various Natural History Societies and a visit to local points of interest including the Archaeology building made up Saturday's program when the New England Federated Societies of Natural History were guests of the Andover Society at their fall meeting.

The opening session was held at the rooms of the Lawrence society on Friday evening. The rooms were open to the public all day and in addition to the permanent collection of minerals and birds, there was a beautiful display of wild flowers. Miss Helen Mank, science teacher at the Lawrence High School gave a most interesting account of some original work on the life history of "Bee Beetles" which was the subject of her thesis in attaining her degree of A.M., at Cornell last summer and Thomas Smith, president of the Lawrence Society gave a talk on "Bee Keeping" which was followed by a general discussion and social hour.

Saturday morning a party of about thirty, including members of the local and visiting societies, spent the morning hunting for mushrooms in the vicinity of Highland road and Missionary Lane. More than fifty varieties were found. These were classified by Mrs. E. B. Blackford, Miss Jennie Conant and other members of the Boston Mycological Club and placed on exhibition at the Punchard school.

Other interesting collections were the traveling exhibit of 200 New England spiders prepared by J. H. Emerton, which beside the actual specimens included thirteen large and finely colored sketches; an interesting collection of thirty pressed specimens of foreign plants sprung from the seed in wool waste, the work of Miss Emily Fletcher of Westford, Mass.; a beautiful display of mounted ferns, grasses and mosses shown by the Rhode Island Field Naturalists Club in charge of Dr. Marion D. Weston of Providence, R. I., and the specimen of dock, the only one of its kind ever found in the United States, sent in by E. M. Kittredge of Woodstock, Vermont.

The local society showed a part of the herbarium of M. E. Gutterman, the Rocky Mountain plants collected by the late William G. Goldsmith and mounted by M. E. Gutterman, the Blake herbarium, the Dove collection of birds, and the Bailey collection of birds recently presented to the society by Louis A. Dane. Dr. John B. Brauner of the Brookline Bird Club who was present at the meeting considered this latter collection a very interesting and valuable acquisition.

Lunch was served at noon by a committee from the local society after which a conference was held in the lecture room of the Punchard School which was attended by about fifty persons.

John Ritchie, Jr., of Boston, president of the New England Federation of Natural History Societies presided at the afternoon session. By the courtesy of J. H. Emerton, secretary, a report was read of the meeting of the federation held in Andover nine years ago. He also gave reports of the various societies from which delegates were not present. Mrs. Franz Schneider reported for the Lawrence society and President Omar P. Chase for the local society.

The Lawrence Natural History Society is doing its work among the boys and girls of families of moderate means and does not have large amounts of money with which to undertake its educational work. It has been remarkably successful in interesting the young people in the out-of-doors, and has brought much of the products of the fields into its rooms in the shape of flower exhibitions which are constantly being studied during the flower season. The collections in other lines, notably minerals, have stimulated the young people to study these products of nature and there is quite an active junior club. Further than this, the Society has had its room open for the public benefit and has maintained its collections as a means of popular education.

Rhode Island has three societies, one of which is entering upon an intensive study of the natural history of the state. Fall River has had underway for some years an important study of its insects and birds. Worcester like Lawrence has devoted much time to the interesting of the young. The Vermont societies are composed mostly of adults whose work in discovery and identification is serious, while the Maine association have each one an important yearly gathering for the study of some one section of their large area.

At the close of the conference a party visited the collections at the Archaeology building under the leadership of Edwin T. Brewster.

Delegates were present from Boston, Westford, Lawrence, Providence, Georgetown, Boston, Ballardvale, Brookline, Methuen and Nantucket.

Soccer

The first soccer game, since the requirements of the war took the field for growing food, was played on the Smith & Dove field Saturday afternoon and before a good crowd a splendid game took place. The mill team was unfortunate in losing for they showed much the better football, especially in the first half, when they should have scored at least four goals. The apparent desire of the forwards to be perfectly placed before shooting for goal was the cause of their defeat, for, while superior physical condition of the visitors beat them in the second half, the local team had a strong defence and it was only beaten by a lucky shot by the visitors' center half, William Kelley, who took the kind of a chance that the home forwards seemed afraid to take. That kind of a shot in the first half would have been better for the Smith & Dove side than holding onto the ball until a back kicked it away. Shoot the ball into the goal mouth, Andover, the goalie is no more perfect in saving than you are in shooting and you might as well win by a little luck as lose by it!

Poor judgment on the part of the committee in picking the team also had much to do with the defeat. Billie Devermond is a forward of known ability and neither plays or wants to play center-half as it should be played. Then in placing Peter Cairnie center-forward where he would be against such a sturdy and strong player as W. Kelley was weak—for, though Peter tried harder than could be expected from one of his slender build, he was beaten by weight in spite of his cleverness.

Cargill was the outstanding figure in the defense and Moffat showed promise of great football in several instances. For the visitors W. Kelley was the star and it was chiefly by his individual efforts that his side won. Bob Jackson for many years a popular and good back for Andover played with his oldtime ability and had much to do with the failure of the home right wing to make good when near the Abbott Worstod goal.

The pitch was in great condition, larger than before and more level. One side of the field was lined with automobiles for there is splendid accommodation for parking cars in the new athletic field.

Pat Darcy was the referee and started the game at 3.30. From the kick-off Smith & Dove got going and Skea soon had a chance but put over. Moffat missed what should have been a sure goal by lifting weakly over the bar after Killackey had placed just right for him. At the other end Glegg was just as weak for after avoiding Low he placed high over. He got another chance right away and again avoiding Low's rush he banged the ball against the net. Smith & Dove continued to have the best of the play and Moffat was the means of getting the first score when he raced after a wind pass and secured the ball near the goal line and turned in to the goal mouth where, before the Abbott backs could find their bearings, Cairnie had tipped the ball past Morley for the opening goal. The point was well deserved and it looked as if Smith & Dove would add several more before they quit but the half ended and they were still but one goal to nothing.

On resuming after a long rest made necessary because of the excessive heat, Abbott showed more dash to their play. Low stopped the first advance by a long kick that took the ball well past center but back came the visitors and Munroe got a long shot from Glegg to handle. Munroe was called upon several times, though the efforts were of the hit-or-miss variety. This bustling attack with the ball forced in front of the home goal all the time, brought results, for Doherty reached it, and with his back to the goal he touched the ball over his head and it fell into the goal far out of reach of Munroe who had been drawn to the other end of his charge.

Up to this stage the game had been stopped but twice for fouls; under the pressure the home side made several infringements; they were feeling the effects of the driving attack. Every time the Abbott Worstod men got the ball they banged it into the goal area. One of these volleys did the trick for when Bill Kelley drove in a long kick Munroe could not get sight of the ball for the players in front of him and it landed in the net. This goal did the trick for while Andover did not lie down the heart was taken out of them to see the visitors ahead when they were not value for the lead. The game ended two to one for the Smith & Dove defense was sound and was not to be blamed for the defeat.

Abbott Worstod: Morley, Hulse and Jackson; Mitchell, W. Kelley and T. Kelley; Gilmartin, Taylor, Wallace, Doherty and Clegg.

Smith & Dove: Munroe, Low and Cargill; Coleman, Devermond and Nicoll; Killackey, Caldwell, Cairnie, Moffat and Skea.

Score: Abbott Worstod 2, Smith & Dove 1. Goals by Doherty, W. Kelley and Cairnie. Referee, Pat Darcy.

An American teacher undertook the task of convincing an indolent native son of the Philippines that it was his duty to get out and hustle.

"But why should I work?" inquired the guileless Filipino.

"In order to make money," declared the thrifty teacher.

"But what do I want with money?" persisted the brown brother.

"Why, when you get plenty of money you will be independent and will not have to work any more," replied the teacher.

"I don't have to work now," said the native—and the teacher gave it up in disgust.

REPUBLICAN RALLY

Mr. Jackson prefaced his remarks with the statement that he had accepted his present office with the purpose of putting into effect a business administration and that he wished to disabuse the public of the idea that the state treasurer's office was a place where people could seek favors. He also paid a generous tribute to Bartlett H. Hayes, than whom no man has given more patriotically of his time and effort to his fellowmen and his country and congratulated the Republicans of Andover on having so efficient a worker in their midst.

Mr. Jackson briefly reviewed conditions in Europe with its complete tie-up of railroads and broken down currency system as he had observed them since the war. American industries are so geared up that we are dependent on the buying power of foreign countries to keep them going. There is a human and economic necessity to morally support and help these peoples and the only hope of a satisfactory adjustment is in the election of Harding and Coolidge.

Miss Frances Nevin, established her right to appear as a speaker by saying that she came from Ohio, for according to an adaptation of the old saying, "Some are born to greatness, some have greatness thrust upon them, and some are born in Ohio."

Speaking of the recent enfranchisement of 23,000,000 women who are about to accept the great responsibility and privilege of voting, she said that this change was welcomed by thinking men all over the country. Man is self-governed only when governed by right and women are sure to stand for right. She characterized the vote as the greatest measure ever devised for measuring public opinion in a short space of time.

The subtle propaganda to be non-partisan was severely scored, and she urged all women to enroll in a party and become active workers in it, recognizing that party which had made suffrage possible and which had assisted in bills peculiarly of interest to women such as those for the organization of a Children's Bureau at Washington, the Woman's Division in the Department of Labor and the Smith-Fowler bill for a more comprehensive scheme of education.

Miss Nevin admits that a League of Nations is desired, but a league which shall be real and safe, and believes that the Republican party which has stood for national rights is the one to formulate such a league.

She regards the Massachusetts Republican League founded by alert men, as a bugle call to the Republican party and to Americanism and declared that women should respond at the polls as patriotically as they had for Red Cross and hospital work, using the ballot to make war impossible and help a righteous nation to elevate a splendid people.

Eliot Wadsworth, P. A. '94, a member of the National Republican committee referred to himself as one of the "gold diggers" that Governor Cox has talked so much about. He denied that a fund of $15,000,000 was being raised and stated that $3,000,000, which was the actual sum to be raised by contributions varying in amount from $1.00 to $1,000 given by men who thus became stockholders in an enterprise to develop knowledge of the party's purpose, was a very moderate sum to spend in reaching 10,000,000 voters by means of various forms of publicity, such as bulletins, public meetings, etc.

Having recently traveled through the stricken districts of Eastern Europe in the interests of the Red Cross, Mr. Wadsworth believes in any measure which is practical to reduce the chance of another war, but that the proposed League of Nations is not possible with Europe unsettled and Italy threatened with revolution. Governor Cox's promise to put through the league of nations sixty days after his inauguration is folly as no one can prophesy what conditions will be seven months from now.

The voters should choose as a leader not a man who is for this league or that league, but a sincere man with a constructive policy and ability to meet conditions as they arise, who stands for a party which will carry out the best ideals of the people. Such a man will be elected by the biggest majority by which any President was ever elected if every member of the Republican party works and pushes for Harding and Coolidge.

Samuel Spring of Boston, also an alumnus of Phillips academy was the last speaker on the program. He declared that the issues of an election had not been so clear and apparent since 1864 when Lincoln defeated a peace-at-any-price candidate, and that the only way to handle the Democratic party was to bury it under an overwhelming mountain of votes.

The next president, who will hold the most powerful office of any in the world, will be confronted by numberless crises, his sympathies will be assailed by every great cause, and he must have great resources of character. That Harding refuses to make promises shows great moral strength. He is not a super-man but a man among men and will determine every question as a patriot and not as a vote-getter.

After the era of Bryan, McAdoo, Palmer, Daniels and Burleson, the time has come for the voters to rise in revolt, turn out the Democratic party and put in a party of efficiency.

The rally closed with the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner."

The latest authentic statistics of road slaughter are that a person is killed by an automobile every thirty-five minutes in the United States, and that the total death toll from such "accidents" is, it has been said, three times as great as that from disasters on railroads, in mines, in factories and in all industries. It is a painful question how long such destruction of human life will be tolerated, before something radical is done for its abatement.

WHEN an experienced motorist starts out to buy a tube, results and not reasons are what he is interested in.

What a tube has done means more to his way of thinking than how it is made or what kind of rubber it is made of.

Andover, Mass.

Saturday, October 9th, has been appointed Fire Prevention Day.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States at its 1920 annual meeting in Atlantic City made the following declaration on fire prevention:

"At a time when increased production is of the first importance, destruction of means of production continues on a great scale. Each year approximately $300,000,000 in property values are being destroyed in the United States through fire. A large part of this value represents waste that can be prevented. Considerations which should appeal to every individual require that, even if conditions were normal, the endeavors which are being made to stop this needless waste, with its detriment to the public interest and its private burden for all citizens, should be redoubled. At a time when economy and conservation of our resources must be paramount, in order that every effort may have its full influence toward increasing production, it becomes the immediate duty of each person, each association, and the whole nation to put an end to preventable waste through fire."

A. J. Murphy, special agent for the Connecticut Union in commenting on this enormous loss by fire in the United States as compared with that in European countries mentions a few striking facts and lays the increasing waste to the indifference and "I should worry" attitude of the people rather than to faulty construction or lack of fire-fighting equipment.

He points out that in the past ten years the growth of fire-resisting construction and sprinkler protection has only been equalled by the continued growth of our already enormous fire waste.

Cigarette smoking has been blamed as a large contributory cause, but Europeans smoke cigarettes more freely and scratch matches (matches which the New York law prohibits) as often as we do. Open fires, particularly in Great Britain, are commonly used for heating as contrasted with our safer method of a steam boiler. The risks of open gas jets, kerosene oil and candles are more than those present with the magic buttons and switches of electric illumination.

Their fire brigades, apparatus equipment and fire-alarm systems compared with ours are a joke. In some of our smallest provincial towns are to be found apparatus and alarm systems to which some of Europe's largest cities haven't aspired.

It's not matches, nor construction, nor smoking nor lighting nor heating, nor fire departments but the responsibility of the individual in — Prevention.

As a speaker at a political meeting, Miss Nevins certainly made a very favorable impression on her Andover audience last Friday evening and no adverse comments were heard from the most critical. Possessed of a pleasing presence and a well-trained voice with which she could easily have filled an auditorium many times the size of the Town hall, she delivered a carefully prepared address, in all points comparing most favorably with the other speakers on the program.

Among the speakers are Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of Review of Reviews; Col. William B. Greeley, chief of the United States Forest Service; Stephen T. Mather, director of the National Parks; Thomas Adams, town planner for Canada; J. Horace McFarland of Harrisburg, Pa., president of the American Civic Association; Mrs. Thomas G. Winter of Minneapolis, Minn., president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; George C. Diehl, highway commissioner for the American Automobile Association; John N. Cole, commissioner of Public Works, Massachusetts.

The American Country Life Association, the Massachusetts State Grange, and the Massachusetts Federation of Town Planning Boards will meet at the college during the same three days and will hold some sessions jointly with the American Civic Association. The meetings are units in the series of conferences to be held in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the college. The college extends a general invitation to all interested in country life to take part in any of the conferences.

SEES IN HARDING BEST TRADITIONS, IDEALS AND HOPES

Nominee's Former Pastor Still Boosting Man Who Will Be
Leader and Not Dictator.

FINDS IN SENATOR NO
TRACE OF RADICALISM

Declares Justice, Kindliness and Mercy
Stand Out as Foremost Characteristics of Republican Candidate.

Included among the Minnesota Republicans working faithfully and industriously in behalf of Senator Harding, is Rev. D. B. Martin, of Winnebago, Minn., formerly pastor of the Marion, Ohio, Baptist Church and Senator Harding's pastor. The other day Rev. Martin was asked just why he is so enthusiastic about Senator Harding, and this is what he said:

"It is a peculiar pleasure for me to continue the work which I began twenty-five years ago. It was my privilege to stand on the side lines and boost for Senator Harding when he received his first nomination for public office. When he was a candidate for the senate I was visiting in Ohio and had the pleasure of boosting for him. It is, therefore, a peculiar pleasure to join with this bunch of Minnesota boosters in seeking to put Senator Harding over, in the greatest gift within the power of the people. Being a clergyman, I have been constantly asked by my friends at the college commencement in Michigan, in Chicago and in Minnesota why I am such a persistent booster for Mr. Harding, and I have been asked to state in this presence my reasons for doing so. These are three:

"The first pertains to certain elements of his character. I will give you these as I received them while I was pastor of the Baptist Church in this city, of which Mr. Harding is a member. I asked him and a group of other men to make some Sunday evening addresses. I do not remember much that Senator Harding said at that time, but I do remember very distinctly the words with which he closed his address and which have stood all these years as outstanding elements of his character to me. He closed the address by a quotation from the Prophets, in which he said, 'And what doth the Lord thy God require of thee but to do justly and love mercy and walk humbly with thy God.' Justice, mercy, kindness and humility have in all these years stood as foremost characteristics of Mr. Harding's life—characteristics which are always attractive and make a man's life worth while.

"The second reason is because I believe that there is focused in him the best traditions, ideals and purposes of the great Republican party and so peculiarly fit him to be the leader in this great crisis of the nation's life. I use the word 'leader' advisedly, for it is leadership that we are needing and not arbitrary, dictatorial, autocratic rule. We have had enough of that. If a boss is desired there would be no need for making any change, for the boss that we have is the bossiest.

"The third reason is because I find in him no trace of radicalism. To me radicalism is the greatest danger that we have to face. Our interests are too diverse to admit of anything of that character. We have our agricultural group with its interests. We have our financial interests. We have that other great group known as the public, that has always been made the 'goat' with its interests. All of these are of vital interest to the common weal and I believe that Senator Harding is broad enough and sympathetic enough so that the interests of each will be blended in the common interest of all, and all will be perfectly safe under his leadership."

"READ THAT, MR. COX"
AND MR. COX DID READ.

A little incident connected with candidate Cox's recent campaign visit to New York indicates that the Democratic nominee is striving to forget certain indiscreet editorials which appeared in his newspaper, the Dayton News, before the owner of the paper aspired to the Presidency.

As the Democratic nominee was leaving the Hotel Commodore after luncheon a commercial traveler forced his way through the throng of curious spectators and thrust into Mr. Cox's hand an editorial clipping which proved to be his denunciation of the commercial travelers of the United States. "Read that, Mr. Cox," commanded the traveling man. The Democratic candidate unfolded the frayed column of newspaper matter, glanced at the heading, scanned the first paragraph, flushed scarlet to the ears and crumpling the offensive and offending editorial in his fist mumbled something which none of those near him at the time would repeat and hurried to his waiting automobile.

In 1904 one of Mr. Cox's newspapers denounced the army of traveling salesmen as "unmitigated bores." What would he say now that he desires their votes? South Bend (Ind.) Tribune.
